Please join the 772nd Military Police Company for a guest speaking engagement by the Violently Injured Police Officers (V.I.P.O.) Organization. V.I.P.O. educates police departments and organizations about the unique problems facing law enforcement officers injured in the line of duty and trains police recruits and in-service training police veterans about the inherent dangers of police work.

DETECTIVE MARIO OLIVEIRA

Detective Mario Oliveira is retired from the Somerville Police Department where he served for 17 years. In November 2010, Detective Oliveira was shot six times while serving an arrest warrant in Somerville. Since that day, he has dedicated his time to educating and assisting other law enforcement officers and their families on the inherent dangers of police work and how to cope with the tragedy of being seriously or fatally injured in the line of duty. Detective Oliveira is also the Vice President of New England C.O.P.S.

Officer Robert DeNapoli

Officer Robert DeNapoli is retired from the Woburn Police Department, where he served for 17 years. In September 2011, Officer DeNapoli was shot several times while responding to an armed robbery at jewelry store. To better prepare police officers and their families on how to cope with the dangers of police work, Officer DeNapoli has devoted his time to V.I.P.O. and providing support to other officers who face the same difficulties.

Officer Jared MacDonald

Officer Jared MacDonald, a 17-year veteran of the Bourne Police Department, has experienced the support from the V.I.P.O. family firsthand. On February 5, in what can only be described as an ambush, Officer MacDonald was responding to a report of a car on fire at a condo complex when he was shot by the suspect who was waiting for police. Officer MacDonald was shot in the back, in the small space exposed below his bullet-proof vest, fracturing his spine and injuring his kidney and liver. As a result of his injuries, Officer MacDonald is left with little feeling in his right leg and a long road to recovery after spending nearly a month in a rehab hospital. Along with his positive mindset and the support of the V.I.P.O. Organization, Officer MacDonald hopes to make a full recovery soon so he can get back to work protecting his community.

Officer MacDonald grew up in upstate New York, and is also a Coast Guard and Marine Corps Veteran.
